Intro To Birding.
LRCC Member: Moses

There are countless different bird species that migrate here each year, and while a lot of birds call Squam Lakes their home, their numbers dwindle year to year. It is important to take a second, slow down, and figure out which ones share this world with us.

This video is meant to make you laugh and hopefully get you inspired to go birding. The scientific nature of this program is however dense you want it to be. You can just sit out and enjoy the songs of birds or take it further and log your outings into eBird. The Cornell Bird Lab has online video and classes you can take part in. You can view that here https://academy.allaboutbirds.org/#_ga=2.222695192.2082020828.1585083623-1464404883.1585083623. Their website also has a lot of information on their different mobile apps (like merlin and eBird as mentioned in the video) and programs they host.

The Bird world is vast and extraordinary. Many birds migrate all the way from New Hampshire to Brazil each year while others just go to the coasts of eastern U.S. Some birds are gorgeous with vibrant colors while others munch on carrion. There are so many things to learn, and maybe you too could make a video about your birding experience. We'd love to see it! Use the hashtag #ShareLearnAdventure to show us your in-home activities or outings. And don't forget to have a Squamtastic time!
